Mariana Maccioni is Full Professor of Fundamental Immunology at the National University of Córdoba (UNC) and Principal Investigator from CONICET (Argentina National Research Council) at the Centre of Research in Clinical Biochemistry and Immunology (CIBICI-CONICET) in Córdoba, Argentina. She is a Biochemist, PhD in Clinical Biochemistry from the UNC. She performed her postdoctoral training in the Institut de Génétique et de Biologie Moléculaire et Cellulaire (IGBMC) at Strasbourg, France. Her group has contributed in understanding the role of endogenous type I IFN at the tumor microenvironment and more recently the impact of type I IFN- signaling in the regulation of the immune compartment in individuals with Trisomy 21. She is currently the Director of the Centre of Research in Clinical Biochemistry and Immunology (CIBICI) from the National Research Council (CONICET). Over the last 7 years, she has been the director of the Department of Clinical Biochemistry from the Faculty of Chemical Sciences in the National University of Córdoba, the director of Posgraduate School, and the director of the Clinical Specialization in Immunology, all these academic activities in the same institution. She was President of the Argentinean Society of Immunology (2021). She has always been committed to the training of human resources in Immunology. She was one of the organizers and foundational members of the ASCAI (Argentinean Spring Course of Advanced Immunology) an international PhD course supported by IUIS and actively participated in PhD programs in Argentinean neighbour countries. Since 2023, she has been actively engaged in precongress "hands on training" courses to develop bioinformatic tools applied to Immunology in our region.

She has served as an Ordinary Council Member (OCM) of the IUIS Council for the 2022–2025 term, actively engaged in promoting greater OCM engagement with both the Executive Committee and the Standing Committees. She will be honoured to continue as a OCM council, looking forward to representing the ALACI community, promoting the participation of ALACI scientists in the different activities that IUIS organize and as a woman, working to promote and facilitate the growth of women in science, encouraging more young scientists, specially from South and Central America, to cooperate and network. She would also work hard to strengthen immunology as a discipline and to support actions designed to boost cooperation among scientists, educators and policy makers that could impact health, educational and scientific systems around the world.
